

Facets near the ground

In some areas that had a thin snowpack in January, a persistent layer of facets exist near the ground. In this case they are buried just over 2.5 feet deep. In other areas they can be found in the middle of the snowpack but buried at about the same depth. Photo: J. Welz

Advisory Region

Northern Gallatin

Northern Gallatin, 2013-02-14