

Poor snow structure at Buck Ridge

We sledged into Buck Ridge (12/4/2019) for the first time this season. The riding was supportable and soft, but we sank to the ground when we stepped off our sleds. This poor snowpack structure makes avalanches possible to trigger, and will create bad avalanche conditions when more snow loads on top. Enjoy the powder in low angle terrain. Photo: GNFAC

Northern Madison

Longitude

-111.38W

Latitude

45.17N

Northern Madison, 2019-12-04